Here's another tip: when painting more than one figure at once (and I always recommend that you do no less than 5-10 figures at one time) line them up in order of wettest-to-driest figures after paining. Thus, when you paint glue on the first figure, place him farthest from you. The second figure you paint, place in front of the last one, and so on. In this way, you will always know which figures are dry and which are wet, and this will help you to not paint on wet ones, thus ruining your ...
